When the crash came the white man was thrown forward from his position on top of a car and landed uninjured on the ground. His companion was less fortunate. He was thrown amongst the dead and crippled cattle and a great pile of wreckage was piled on top of him. The eattle were wild with fright and kept ap a deafening bellowing all the while, but above their angry roars the voice of the terrified darkey begging to be rescued could be heard. Every time one of the cattle moved its position the colored man would scream for help. fatal malady, not even the members of FIVE EMPLOYES KILLED,

But the Passengers Escape Without Serious Injury.

In a head-end collision between the west-bound Flyer and a stock train, on Wednesday evening, six lives were lost, The wreck happened at a point three miles east of Rockwood, about 5:40 o'clock. The blame for the disaster will probably never be placed, as the engineers of both trains are among the dead. The Flyer is Trent, A. H. Ferner. due at Rockwood at 5:40 P. M. and is officially known as train No. 5. The stock train was running as the first section of train No. 64, otherwise known as the Mountain Accommodation, It left Connellsville shortly after 3 o'clock Wednesday afternoon with Engineer Frank Browning at the throttle on Engine 1221. The list of those killed are as follows: HENRY BUSH, engineer of the Flyer,

FRANK D. BROWNING, engineer of he stock train, Conneilsville, PATRICK McCARTY, fireman of the Flyer, Hazelwood. GEORGE DEVERE, front brakeman of the stock train, Cumberland.
J. L. PIERCE, railway mail clerk, J. G. DEGRANGE, railway mail clerk, Berkley Springs, W. Va. C. H. HOOTON and FRANK WIL-

LIAMSON, two railway mail clerks of Baltimore, were seriously hurt. Engineer Bush had orders to pass First 64 with Engine 1221 at Pine Grove siding. As he neared the station Fireman McCarty leaned out of his window, on which side the siding is, and seeing an engir with some cars attached standing there, supposed it was First 64. The train was running at a high rate of speed and it is supposed that Fireman McCarty failed to notice that the engine was not 1221 and gave Engineer Bush the signal that evrything was all right. In a minute the ponderous engine of the stock train hove in sight and there was a tremendous crash as the two locomotives came together. Fireman Coughenour of Engine 1231 mped as soon as he saw the Flyer turn the curve. He escaped with a few bruises. Engineer Bush of the Flyer also jumped, but too late, and he was covered by the wreck. Engineer Browning and Brakeman Devere stayed on the engine of the stock train and were buried in the debris. Mall Clerk Hooton, who was in charge of the mail car, gives the following account of the wreck :

"We were running very fast, probably 50 miles an hour, when the collision of curred. Pine Grove is the regular passing point for train 61 and generally it is pulled in on the siding when the Flyer arrives, so that we are not compelled to wait. Engineer Bush, though, it seems, had orders to lay there for First 64, which a train standing at Pine Grove when we passed and about a minute later felt the air being applied all of a sadden. When the two engines came to gether Williamson and myself were thrown on our heads on the bottom of the ear. Then began a grinding noise compled with the eracking and breaking of imbers and load bellowing, which I aferwards learned came from the cattle on he stock train. Every ear of the latter was smashed and the cattle either killed ontright or toppled over the bank. My ead was caught below the cars by the grinding timbers and twisted until I thought my time had come. But just then the cars stopped moving and I was Fred Dapont, of Rockwood, was also saved.
